Humility

Progress is never assured. It is the result of a determined accomplishment of each task required to complete one step. All is then reviewed.

If the accomplishment is successful you are directed to the next step. Progress is made through your own determined effort and ability to repeat what is not successfully achieved.

Humility is frequently spoken about but very little is offered about how it is learnt. Each step you take upon the Master's Path is filled with tasks that have to be a successfully accomplished. When success is not the result and the tasks have to be repeated in maybe a different format you may feel inadequate and humbled by your failure, sometimes again and again.

At some steps you can fail so often it becomes obvious that it is only your determined effort that causes you to continue. Humility in the face of repeated failure is accompanied by strength of purpose.

What finally becomes apparent is that the real task of this step of the journey is to achieve humility and strength of purpose, repeated failure only being the tool.

In reality failure did not exist.
